Hair Sheep Of Western Africa And The Americas Jul 14 2022 Perhaps less than 10 percent of the world's sheep have hair coats instead of wool fleeces, but as an animal resource, these sheep are important far out of proportion to their numbers. Pan-Africanism: Political Philosophy and Socio-Economic Anthropology for African Liberation and Governance Nov 18 2022 This Book is the outcome of a long project begun thirty years ago. It is a book on the makings of pan-Africanism through the predicaments of being black in a world dominated by being white. The book is a tribute and celebration of the efforts of the African-American and African-Caribbean Diaspora who took the initiative and the audacity to fight and liberate themselves from the shackles of slavery. It is also a celebration of those Africans who in their own way carried the torch of inspiration and resilience to save and reconstruct the Free Humanism of Africa. As a story of the rise from the shackles of slavery and poverty to the summit of Victors of their Renaissance Identity and Self-Determination as a People, the book is the story of African refusal to celebrate victimhood. The book also situates women as central actors in the Pan-African project, which is often presented as an exclusively masculine endeavour. It introduces a balanced gender approach and diagnosis of the Women actors of Pan-Africanism which was very much lacking. The problem of balkanisation of Africa on post-colonial affiliations and colonial linguistic lines has taken its toll on Africa's building of its common identity and personality. The result is that Africans are more remote to each other in their pigeon-hole-nation-states which put more restrictions for African inter-mobility, coupled by education and cultural affiliations, the communication and transportation and trading networks which are still tied more to their colonial masters than among themselves. This book looks into the problem of the new wave of Pan-Africanism and what strategies that can be proposed for a more participatory Pan-Africanism inspired by the everyday realities of African masses at home and in the diaspora. This book is the first book of its kind that gives a comprehensive and multidimensional coverage of Pan-Africanism. It is a very timely and vital compendium.

Impact of Lifestyle and Demographics on the Gut Microbiota of Acne Patients and the Response to Minocycline Jul 22 2020
The gut microbiota is known to vary depending on lifestyle and demographics. We performed a case-control study to characterize the gut microbiota in acne patients before and after antibiotics, and examined associations with race, intake of milk/yogurt, acne severity, and stress. 8 acne patients (3 Caucasian, 3 African American, and 2 Asian) were matched to 8 controls by age, race, and sex. Stool was collected from all participants at baseline and from acne patients after 4 weeks of oral minocycline therapy (100 mg BID). Bacterial community profiling was performed via Illumina MiSeq sequencing of the 16S rRNA gene (V3V4 region) and sequence analyses using the QIIME, MetaStats 2.0 and SPSS-25 software. Notable variations were observed at the phylum level in the Firmicutes to Bacteroidetes (F/B) relative abundance ratio. A lower F/B ratio has been linked to a Western diet and also with acne. We found the F/B ratio to be highest in Caucasians, followed by African Americans and then Asians at each time point. Using independent t-tests, the F/B ratio was significantly reduced ($p=0.027$) following antibiotics in Asians only. The F/B ratio was significantly higher in those consuming both milk and yogurt compared to those consuming neither, both before ($p=0.031$) and after ($p=0.021$) antibiotics. The F/B ratio was at baseline higher among those who later experienced minimal efficacy from antibiotics than among those who later derived a moderate benefit. The F/B ratio was higher before antibiotics in both moderate and high stress groups, nearing significance in the high stress group ($p=0.057$). Although the sample size was small, our data demonstrated important trends in the gut microbiota across demographic and lifestyle groups. In particular, race and diet were observed to significantly impact the F/B ratio in acne patients undergoing antibiotic therapy.

Breaking the Color Barrier Nov 06 2021 The history of sports and race is messy. In baseball Jackie Robinson is universally touted as the first black major league player, which conveniently forgets Moses Fleetwood Walker and other players of color who appeared on 19th century diamonds.

Football deals with the messiness a different way. The sport employs the term "modern era" instead. So Kenny Washington is the first black player of the "modern era." James Harris was the first black quarterback to start an NFL game in the "modern era." Art Shell was the first black head coach of the "modern era." The reason football has to append the qualifier to its historical racial milestones is because there was a man who was doing all those things back when the National Football League began. His name was Fritz Pollard, and this is his story.

Races on Display Jun 20 2020 While European commerce in race was substantial, the colonial trade in ideas of race was highly profitable as well. Looking at official propaganda and commercial representations in France during the Third Republic, this book explores the way the French increased the value of their racial identity at home at the expense of their colonized brothers and sisters. The French did not create the identity-effacing stereotypes of Africans, Arabs, and Indochinese. Instead they refined or remolded these images, and as they did so they redefined and remolded their images of themselves. Focusing on world's fairs, colonial expositions, and mundane manufacturers' trademarks, Races on Display shows not only the prevalence of racial stereotypes, but also how complex these representations prove to be.

Principles of Medicine in Africa Nov 25 2020 Principles of Medicine in Africa combines classical clinical medicine with a rich understanding of the major environmental and cultural influences on health and disease, providing comprehensive guidance for anyone intending to practise medicine in Africa. Disease is presented in the context of family and culture, and the effects of inequality and problems of limited resources are addressed. The authors have a wealth of experience in front line healthcare and provide practical, evidence-based management guidelines for all the common and less common conditions likely to be encountered. This fourth edition has been thoroughly updated to incorporate the latest research findings and management guidelines.

It includes an expanded section on maternal and child health, but careful editing has generated a slimmer volume, whilst retaining all of the essential content. This is the one essential text for medical students and healthcare professionals wanting a complete and up-to-date reference book on medicine in Africa.

Afro Hair of the Ancient Egyptians and Blackheads, Africans of Mesopotamia Feb 21 2023 The Caucasian appearance of the hair on Egyptian mummies has been skilfully avoided by many Black scholars. Professor Diop appears to have been the only scholar to give it even a cursory treatment. We believe had he lived beyond 1986 he would have given the question the detail of attention it deserved. We conclude this because of the scientific pioneering spirit he showed in conducting the melanin dosage test is the same one that would have been required to solve this problem. This booklet deals with the contentious issue and puts it to rest. The ancient Egyptians had Afro hair! Professor Cheikh Anta Diop used the multi-disciplinary method to prove that the ancient Egyptians were Black. Now for the first time the ancient Mesopotamians are having the same multi-disciplinary approach applied to them. There is also a review of their political history and spiritual accomplishments. Art, anthropology, religion and history show the Mesopotamians of ancient times were Black. This book was presented as a lecture alongside Dr Ben in October 2001 at the Dr Ben Memorial Lecture in London.
